

Question 17 (a)

of woman in her early forties having her first child may need to give up her job, will realise that she doesn't have a lot of spending money to buy new things for herself or her home. Will need to give up a lot of social outings with friends or if she does have some they will include taking a baby along.

Will need to manage her time better as well as proper shopping habits. e.g. she may use to just grab things here and there as she needed them but with a child she won't have so much free time so she will have to do one big shop instead of 10 little ones, will need to always organise things that involve a baby tagging along will need to be able to ~~hard~~ get use to a lot of noise late nights early mornings sleepless nites a messy home.

(b) Culture and religion may influence parenting and caring relationships.

As they might have rules traditions within the culture/religion that need to be done. e.g. marriage before birth getting your boy circumcised not show any skin may need to be very strict with your children like no friends over that aren't of the same religion no drinking or smoking, some religions may have rules like only males have education so you can only send your son to school. Religions may have rules like your children should be seen and not heard in which you have to teach them even if you don't particularly want to. Culture and religion influence how a child is brought up. ~~Whether they are treated~~ They give parents/carers a list of shoulds and shouldnts and with the beliefs of the parent/carer they are enforced onto their child however the parent /carer may be a little more lenient they still are influenced by their religion or culture or a parent or carer may not want to be a part of that religion or culture anymore and decide to rebel against it this will also influence the child/ren.

(c) Most parents learn as they go, influenced by the way they were brought up or by what they have read or watched others do. Parenting styles may be different but we all share a common goal.

It is the responsibility of the parent/care giver to provide children with their needs and to raise them to be the best they can be.

Parents responsibility is to provide food, water, shelter, ^{clothing} and education to their child there are no rules or ~~instructions~~ ^{instructions} on how you provide them nor a list of steps, most parents learn as they go and do so by making a mistake here and there getting help off others remembering how they themselves were brought up research in books on different methods roles extra or watch others to raise there children.

Parenting styles all vary in some way ~~but~~ ~~both~~ and usually consist of many different ways in one as they are being influenced by many different ^{things} ~~things~~ but it is the aim of most parents to raise there children the best way they can and to provide there children with everything it is a common goal of parents to see there children grown up happy and some day with children of their own and to be able to say look what I did I raised a beautiful healthy boy that has grown to be a ~~was~~ successful grown man with integrity morals and pride.

Parents are influenced by their own morals values standards and priorities on how they bring up their children and after ~~that~~ pass their morals values and standards on.
