

Question 17 - Parenting and Caring

The social changes which a woman may experience when having her first child in early forties is leaving work and also for those women in forties is harder for them to give birth than in twenties and most important thing sometimes they don't get pregnant (can't get pregnant) which leads them to get fertilisation by the doctors and is by the way very expensive.

Older parents might use to bring up their children the way they use to.

Also people from overseas who had their children here might use their cultural system from their country which might be already changed there infact that they don't know that. Sometimes that's where it comes to the argument between the child and the parent and sometimes it leads children to leave home and "may be" become homeless.

c)

I believe all parents are the same, they all want the best for their children another words they all share a common goal. Some parents wants to bring up their children the way they were brought up with stricktiness without not doing what they wanted while children but some are less strickt than the others. But this is true they all share a common goal.
