

TEXT ONE

- (a) (i) One ^{mentioned} change in the song lyric is the change from a place where trees are found to a place where there is a parking lot. This is an environmental change.
- (ii) The two techniques used to convey this negative environmental change ~~is~~ and hence the ideas in the song ~~is~~ are repetition and visual imagery. By constantly repeating "They paved paradise / And put up a parking lot" the author's view is presented ^{and emphasized} showing ~~that~~ ironically, ^{that} a parking lot is paradise, when it clearly isn't. The other technique is the use of visual imagery, by directly contrasting a "parking lot with a pink hotel..." to "Spots on my apples", you can see that a specific environmental change has taken place. That is the change from a natural surroundings to artificial surroundings created by man.

TEXT TWO

(b) The cartoonist ~~we~~ shows his view of change through the use of vectors.

The way the road curves in the foreground brings the ~~responders~~^{readers} attention to the sign that says "~~abolish the~~^{a modern} tropical rainforest soon to be erected on this site". This then, ~~brings~~^{causes} the reader to see the ~~modern~~ houses and metropolis behind the sign. Through the use of vectors we can see that the cartoonist has a humorous and almost negative view of change, because nowadays a sign is that announces a new estate is in front of natural surroundings - trees & plants. The cartoonist is making a humorous comment on the stupidity of man, because they are now ~~clearing~~ destroying housing to make room for rainforests, when they could've left the rainforests alone in the first place.

TEXT THREE

(c) The poet presents a ~~change~~ in the natural world by using vivid imagery and personal language. The poet begins by putting ^{on} images in the reader's head. "life among the tree roots" and describing in explicit detail what is ^{happening and} changing, ~~by~~ "heave head and limbs through split skin", "surface through the leaf mould" and "unfurl the lace air of ^{your} the wings". By using this vivid imagery she is able to show a natural change. She also communicates a natural change through the use of personal language - "you" and "our". By constantly using "you" throughout the poem she personalizes the change the cicada is going through, thus a natural change is emphasized and communicated.

TEXT FOUR

(d) The website sees the changes that the Inuit people are going through as a positive change. It does this through the images on the screen, the description of the way their lives have changed and the title of the website "Net of the North, Canada's Inuit people get a tool to help forge their new land". By having a positive title ~~who~~ that conveys the changes happening to the Inuit people's way of life as good and helping them, it shows that the effects of change are for the better. The descriptive writing, talks of how the Inuit's life has changed, "They love sending messages to friends ... across the north" and "They are embracing computers ...". All of the descriptions of the Inuit's new life are ~~positive~~ upbuilding, thus the website presents a positive change to the life style of the Inuits. The image on the screen (the one of the Inuit hunting) directly contrasts their old way of life to the descriptions in the website, which shows that the Inuit's lifestyle even though it has changed, still contains the traditions that have been in their families - hunting.

By showing that to the ~~for~~ responders that they've adapting to the change ~~well~~^{well}, a positive effect of to the Inuit's way of life is presented.

TEXTS 1-4.

(e) the two texts that should be included in the CD-ROM, Past present, Future should be the song lyric and the website.

The reason: is because these two texts show the ^{varying} effects that change has on people or an individual by commenting on the Past, present and the future. In the song lyric, the past and present, and the change that has occurred is spoken of. In the past there were trees "They took all the trees"

and there was a natural environment

"leave me the birds and the bees". This natural scene in the past is compared directly to the artificial scene in the present time; "a parking lot with a pink hotel and a swinging hot spot". By contrasting the past and present a negative

view of environmental change is presented.

The website deals with the present and future changes, ~~even~~ commenting on how the changes happening to the local people

are positive and ^{suggesting that} ~~offering~~ a happy lifestyle

^{will} result for the people because of the change. The positive and joyous language ~~helps~~ ^{this} convey ~~these~~ ideas- "they love", "they are embracing" and

"building new cultural bonds". Thus the change is positive and hopeful for the future. So the reason that these two texts should be in the CD-ROM is because they all deal with the past, present and future, and the vary with the effects of change.
