

Elective 3 Consumerism

• Poetry Bruce Dawe

I would like my text to be included in your program because it has lots to do about our society today.

To start I have been studying a poem from Bruce Dawe's collection which is called ~~americanised~~ televista which talks about how today's society is a lived around one small box in the household ~~with~~ which is the t.v. firstly we have a person who is sitting down who is partly blind and has trouble with trying to tune the tv set because of today's hi-tech T.V. but soon can get a clear picture. He can see chinese people begging for help violence, and disturbing pictures of people in anguish. The man after seeing the scenes on the T.V set and figuratively kill 1 million chinese in one go. Killing a million chinese in one go symbolises to us that people today watching these scenes on ~~tv~~ won't be stopped by them to give the people some importance but instead have to see more violence and more disgusting images on T.V in order to catch their ~~attention~~ attention. From this we can see that today's society has developed an attitude and a stronger heart towards things that once use to get us up set and sad but ~~aff~~ after becoming immune to things that once made us sad today they need something that is even more disgusting than previously to get their attention.
