

The effectiveness of the strategies and tactics used by soldiers in Vietnam between 1960 and 1975 was very good by the Vietnamese soldiers however ^{the enemy} because most of the Vietnamese bases were underground and very hard to detect.

In the underground bases the Vietnamese had everything from a small hospital for the injured soldiers to a place for them to sleep.

These bases were very good because ~~they~~ the Vietnamese soldiers could come up from under the ground and attack the enemy and kill and then could get back underground without being seen by the enemy.

These underground bases also allowed the soldiers to throw bombs from them and disappear without being seen. These bases spread for ~~many~~ miles ~~underground~~ underground one base would lead to another base ~~which~~ ^{which} made it very difficult for the enemy to knock down.

Another ~~best~~ ~~best~~ tactic was air attacks they would come without warning to the enemy and would cause great loss of life to them.

Also the Vietnamese were very clever because they knew the surrounding areas and they could lead the enemy into surrounding bushland and could ~~do~~ hide and wait ~~up~~ ~~up~~ until the enemy was lead into the write position where they would then attack whether it was a bomb attack a man on man attack or an air attack.

I think that the vietnamese won the war because they were very clever in their attacks and would constantly manage to outwit the enemy.
