

Start here.

Question 12 - Popular Culture.

(c) The implications of continued globalisation on the future consumption of rock and roll has affected many artists and fans. Rock and roll music started originally about the use of drugs, sex, and rock and roll. Many teenagers were listening to that type of music and the parents were not very happy about it. The parents mostly stopped their teenage children to listen to it because they did not want them to be affected and brainwashed by them. The teenagers did not think much of it so they didn't realise the big deal from it.

Rock and roll is still very popular today and the meaning behind the lyrics have not changed much. Although parents back then were more conservative and today's parents are more laid back and carefree.

The music is accepted nowadays than in the older days and very popular in both the days.

Rock and roll is a continued globalisation on the future consumption which is these days and it is not being stopped from teenagers listening to it.