

© The continuing globalisation of society can create major implications for the future consumption of rock and roll. With the constant ~~and~~ growth of technology and new sounds the music industry must constantly adapt getting larger and larger and with the stakes going higher so are the expectations of bigger and better things contributing of the possible future that the music industry and stake holders will be unable to withstand globalisation and many smaller companies may be left bankrupt. ~~or make it actually~~
~~But~~ But although these companies are in danger the access for us listeners will be higher than ever with the ever constant flow of new technology allowing us to access music, lyrics and live feeds almost ~~instantly~~ instantaneously.

Additional writing space on back page.