Buddhism

Buddhism's historical basis ^{began by a} ~~is a~~ man aspired to this religion. He began his own religion and called himself "the buddha". He was married and he had a child on the way but left ^{his family} ~~them~~ in order to ^{form} ~~start~~ his own religion, ~~as~~ he believed in something that he thought was great and thought many people may share the same values and aspirations in life. He began this religion and called himself "the enlightened one". He believed in something and tried really hard to make people see what Buddhism was all about. He created and wrote the four noble truths and created a religion based on what he believed, and ~~many~~ ^{people} who ^{also aspired to his beliefs and religion} ~~what he had in mind~~ would also ~~participate~~ participate in the worshipping of the religion.

Buddhism originated several centuries ago and has now become one of the ^{world's} largest and ^{recognized} ~~most~~ religions. People from all over the world are now participating in this religion. It was established in India and ~~was~~ eventually ventured to south-east Asia and eventually ventured into ~~the~~ ~~rest~~ the rest of the world. It is now a very popular religion for people to follow.

B) Globalisation is when ~~everyone~~ everyone can have access to something, it could be through technology, communication etc.

Globalisation has had a major impact on the Buddhism belief systems as people interpret the belief systems differently and choose whatever way that suits them to preach or follow the belief systems. Globalisation has allowed for Buddhism to expand and in contemporary society Buddhism is one of the dominant religions. Many people have aspired to this religion as they have the same values, customs and traditions and they feel that the Buddhism religion is the right religion for them. It's an adequate religion for them. The Buddhism belief system is consistently changing and evolving as change is inevitable. Evolutionary theory impacts the Buddhism belief system as the religion ~~at~~ consistently changes and overtime becomes more westernised. People in our contemporary society choose to follow this religion as they feel it is becoming more westernised and globalised.

Buddhism is a religion that is accessed all over the world specifically Asian countries such as China. It is a religion that many people can relate to and a religion where people feel they can express their feelings and faith.

Globalisation has had a dramatic impact on the Buddhism belief system which is ^{clearly} stated above
but overall it is a positive impact as people all over the world ~~can~~ can participate in ~~the~~ this religion and aspire to the traditional beliefs of Buddhism.
