

Start here.

Buddhism is a religion of peace. It's teachings are for the person to reach nirvana which is a total peace within themselves as well as the world. The Dalai lama has met with numerous amounts of people from all different countries and religions, this shows us that he is trying to make peace with everyone.

Buddhists do not believe in war or anything to do with harming anything. They believe that not only humans should be safe and unharmed but also animals and the environment.