The role of ideology and beliefs in society is relative to that in which it exists.

Ideology creates a relationship to a particular value set or image which may create associations with religion, culture, belief or other defining factors which can ~~implement~~ <sup>influence</sup> our interaction within society. These ideologies can be created, influenced or altered at any time.

Ideology and belief ~~as~~ in society create sub-culture relations and micro-world ~~a fact~~ effects such as exclusivity of particular beliefs i.e. the exclusive brethren or agents for socialisation for minority groups such as homosexual clubs or ethnic based communities i.e. Chinatown.

The ideology and beliefs which influence our behaviour and interactions within society are an essential part of our macro-world culture. The definition created on a macro-world scale is reliant upon the sub-cultures of society and the ideology and beliefs which they associate themselves with.
