

4 Which of the following best describes the process of compilation?

- ✓ (A) The entire source code is translated into object code that may be executed at any time.
- (B) The entire source code is translated into object code, after which the code is immediately executed.
- (C) Each line or statement of a piece of source code is translated into object code and immediately executed before moving on to the next line.
- (D) Parts of the source code are translated into object code as a whole and parts are translated into object code one line at a time, and then executed immediately.

Question 4 : % answers correct by band range

