

"From generation to generation, Judaism teaches us how to deepen our lives, to improve the world and to join with others who have the same lofty aims". In this quote we see that Judaism as living tradition gives depth & meaning to the life of the individual and the Jewish Community."

Judaism gives meaning to life through many things such as environmental ethics, sexual ethics, etc and all these is what determines how we live and how deep our faith goes within Judaism as a whole.

The Individual in Judaism is a very hard role to play because it not only has many laws & rules to follow but from generation to generation it is harder to live our lives as a life as a Jew and pray. Through each individual, Judaism deepens the lives of not only the individual but the community surrounding you.

The Jewish community have a goal which is to deepen the lives of themselves and as a group they can deepen there lives easier because having people around you who practice the same teachings has a good affect on how your faith is deepened and in this the Jewish community ~~try~~ tries to improve the world and join with others not only their religion to share the same lofty aims.

In conclusion we see that Judaism is about deepening in faith and as a community to strengthen this faith and have a strong faith and to share their ideas with others who share the same ideas or goals and this can be other religions also.
