

Question 2:

a.) All these men, whom you see present, are utterly convinced that the charge on which the case is based is unjust, and could only result from ^{the most vicious} unprecedented criminality ever occurred, they dare not to defend this man, because ^{of} the turmoil of our times. In this way, they are here today, because of their duty, they are staying quiet so that they might avoid danger. What therefore am I doing? Am I the bravest of the all? Of course not. Do I feel so much more a sense of duty than the rest?

I do not need your praise, nevertheless I am willing to do what other say I should.