

a) All those, whom you see here, think that in this case an unjust charge brought about by unheard of wickedness should be repelled. They are here because they are following a duty, but remain silent because of the danger to life. What then? Am I the bravest of them all? By no means. Or with a keener sense of duty than the rest? I am not so eager even for that praise as to wish others to be deprived on it.